Chapter 1 by Story Wars

Being the “new girl” has it’s pros and cons. You have to leave everything you built back home behind whether or not it’s good. I won’t admit to anything but here in this town where no one knows who I am or who I was will only see me as I let them perceive me as. I can be anyone I want to be. I can be the stereotypical “bad girl” or the “queen bee” that everyone hates yet wants to be at the same time. Well, maybe not everyone but you get the jist.

I have moved more times than I can count. I pray to God that I don’t have to move again even if this town turns out to be a hellhole. I’m not that person that runs away like a coward when difficult things shoot your way. I’m the type of person who faces things head on no matter how hard or easy it is.

For once, I sound like a hypocrite. There’s a first for everything right? My family doesn’t know it, but before I knew we were moving to Blackbird, Alabama, I was in a crisis and still am. I swear I have schizophrenia or something because I’m extremely paranoid. Not that anyone notices but I also don’t show my emotions very often. Isn’t it ironic how people who go through so much turn out to be the greatest people you ever meet yet when you go through very little you are one to be a bitch?

Yeah well the past can't be changed but you can choose your future. That's exactly what I did when I chose to get in with the wrong crowd. I thought I could control my future but we don't always get what we want now do we? That is why I want to be someone new. Someone no one knows. Someone nobody ever really knows.
